Al Ewing, Rob Williams : Doctor Who: The Eleventh Doctor Volume 1- After Life before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Doctor Who: The Eleventh Doctor Volume 1- After Life:

I'm simply not impressed with the stories written by Al Ewing and Rob Williams together (Chapter 1 and 2) and two by Al alone (Chapter 4 and 5). Some of them were simply a bit too silly and others seemed bland. Frankly, the story written by Rob Williams

(Chapter 3) alone was a bit better than the rest and I think it would have been much better if it was stretched out a chapter more or two, building up more of the mystery. Maybe I'd enjoy more of Rob's stories if he goes solo for the Doctor Who line. Simon Fraser as an artist...no, just no. He's not a terrible artist and there were a few scenes that were impressive, such as the spread out of the planet's past and future in Chapter 2. However, his artwork came across a bit shoddy in places and failed to capture the likeness of Matt Smith. Simon needs to put more practice on drawing a teary eye because it looked like he had Alice's eyeballs melting down her cheeks. I think Simon would be a decent artist for a comic line that doesn't require in capturing a real person's likeness. I like Gary Caldwell's color palette though and I am curious to see how he'd use his coloring talent for a different artist. Boo Cook is a better artist but he too failed to capture Smith's likeness. I've found Cook's art too clean for my liking - fewer lines and a lot of empty spaces which made the pictures less detailed. Just not very dynamic. Hi-Fi's coloring doesn't compliment Cook's art very well because he likes bright colors which made Cook's art look sparse. I think a colorist that have the inclination for muted colors would be a better choice for Cook's art of few lines and empty spaces. I am hoping that there will be some variety of writers and artists for the Eleventh Doctor line, allowing us to find ones that have the IT factor like the Tenth Doctor did with Nick Abadzis and Elena Casagrande. Perhaps the Matt Smith Doctor is simply a difficult character to capture in writing and drawing?
