flat out amazing. It's beautiful to behold (and very "Star Wars"). The story is interesting, but nothing ground shaking. It picks up at the last moments of the Battle of Endor. In The Force Awakens, we are introduced to Poe Dameron, who is described as the best starfighter pilot in the Resistance. This book features Poe's parents (and refers to Poe as a child). His mother was an A-Wing pilot at the Battle of Endor. Poe's father was a commando following General Solo on the moon of Endor, tasked with taking down the shield generator that protects the Death Star II. The Duros pilot L'ulo also appears. He is Shara's (Poe's mother) Flight Leader. Later, L'ulo will fly under her son, Poe Dameron, as a member of Black Squadron. The single-issue story that focuses on C-3PO is also included in this hardback, and the story is a little gem. I smiled when I read it. Remember in The Force Awakens that 3PO appears with a red arm? This story tells how the droid obtained it. It's a good read all around.

By Benjamin P
This is a good comic mini-series, and gives some good background info on Poe Dameron, as well as some Luke Jedi action. What sucks is that a good fourth of this book is an excerpt or first comic of the Leia series, which did (is doing) pretty poorly. I don't like paying $10+ for a book that isn't that long and dedicates too many pages to try and prop up sales of a lower quality comic.

By S_Latta
Very disappointing. The comic felt like it was just barely getting started when it ended, each of the four individual comic books that make up this edition seem to be a mere 16 pages or so long. That's it, 64 pages, and even in that, not much story or character development. Fully 1/3 of the book is previews of Marvel's other Star Wars comics. If you're looking for a story that ties Jedi to Force Awakens, or even tells what happened right after Jedi, you'll be very disappointed with this comic.

For the first time in the new Star Wars canon, journey with us into the time after the end of Star Wars Episode VI Return of the Jedi!
