Ivan Cohen, Gabe Eltaeb : Tattooed Man Trouble! (Green Lantern: The Animated Series) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Tattooed Man Trouble! (Green Lantern: The Animated Series):

After Razer is injured in a battle, he reveals that his facial scars are really tattoos, and Hal recounts an adventure from his past when he faced the Tattooed Man.

About the AuthorA former editor and media-development executive at DC Comics, Ivan Cohen worked on the DC Universe line of direct-to-video animated movies as well as the popular TV series SMALLVILLE, BATMAN: THE BRAVE AND THE BOLD and YOUNG JUSTICE. As a writer, Cohens recent credits include the GREEN LANTERN: THE ANIMATED SERIES comic book, articles for Time Out magazine, and an episode of the upcoming Cartoon Network television series BEWARE THE BATMAN. The co-producer of SECRET ORIGIN: THE STORY OF DC COMICS (2010), he is a consultant on the upcoming PBS documentary SUPERHEROES: THE NEVER-ENDING BATTLE (2013). Luciano Vecchio currently lives in Buenos Aires, Argentina. With experience in illustration, animation, and comics, his works have been published in the US, Spain, UK, France, and Argentina. His credits include Ben 10 (DC Comics), Cruel Thing (Norma), Unseen Tribe (Zuda Comics), Sentinels (Drumfish Productions), and several DC Super Heroes books for Stone Arch Books. Gabe was born on July 24th, 1978 in Greeley, Colorado. When he was 8 years old, Gabe moved to San Diego, California. He spent much of his time in SoCal hanging out on the beach and eating fish tacos. In high school, Gabe loved two things: playing football and reading comic books. He was pretty good at football, but nothing could compare with his love of comics and illustration. After a chance encounter with a professional illustrator, Gabe began to realize his dream of drawing comics for a living. Gabe has since worked on a wide variety of books for DC Comics as a colorist and illustrator.
